POST-ACCIDENT ROADMAP

Your guide to what to do after a car, truck or motorcycle accident

You will need to keep track of lots of different pieces of information after an auto accident. This roadmap was created to help you keep all the information about your accident in one place, so you can add to it and access it easily when you need it.

This document does not create a professional relationship between any injured parties and Hill, Peterson, Carper, Bee, & Deitzler, LLC. It is an informational tool designed to provide people who have been injured in car accidents a guide for what to do next and what information to collect in service of any potential personal injury lawsuit.

WRITE DOWN WHAT YOU REMEMBER

This document can serve as an information log to help you remember what happened. If you think a detail could possibly be relevant to your case, write it down here or in a separate accident journal. It's better to retain the information you remember now than be straining to recall details later. Your accident journal will also be helpful to your attorney when you discuss your case and go over what happened.

DON'T TALK TO INSURANCE COMPANIES

There is nothing for you to gain by speaking to insurance companies before speaking to a lawyer. This is particularly important as it pertains to the insurance company of person who caused the accident. In fact, whatever you discuss with an insurance company can hurt your case. If you've been in an accident, call a lawyer immediately, especially if the insurance company wants to talk to you about your injuries.
